A town named Letha (pronounced "lee-tha", smaller than Rocky Ford) once flourished in the vicinity of Whitaker Mill, and was designated a US Postal Office from 1890-1910. Mill operator, Thomas H. Whitaker (T.H.), is listed as a "Merchant not in Towns" from Letha in the 1907 North Carolina Year Book section on Franklin County.

Letha consisted of a General Store (Post Office), a Miller's House, supporting storage buildings, and a cemetery.

Surprisingly, Letha vanished in the 1950's, but the nearby Rocky Ford remains – if only as a namesake for the forgotten Haysville-Millford Crossroad.

The name Letha is a variant "Lethe" from Greek Mythology which is one of five Rivers in Hades that means "River of Oblivion". A cup of water from "Lethe" makes you forget everything from your former life. Your soul may then cross the River Styx with help from Charon the Oarsman.
